Let's Start!

I'm afraid we are on different pages ...

Learning Outcome

Describe the reasons or results of events or actions in spoken or written texts, in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do you consider yourself artistic? Why or why not?
- How do you deal with constructive criticism?

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss reasons and results of an event or an action related to work and jobs.
- I can express duty and advice related to work and job issues.
- I can exchange complex professional information related to work and job issues.

Let's Explore!

Kristi meets with Ronald, the illustrator. Are they on the same page?

* "On the same page" means agreeing or having the same vision.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Kristi: Thanks for coming in. I don't know if we've ever met before. I'm Kristi.
Ronald: No, first time. I'm Ronald.
Kristi: Nice to meet you Ronald. Now, as I mentioned, Denise and I have some reservations with the illustrations.
Ronald: Ok. What are your concerns?
Kristi: Well first, we've felt since we saw the illustrations that they appear to be too busy. From my perspective, the illustrations should have more balance between the visuals and the white space on the page. Do you concur?
Ronald: Um. Yes, we can do that for you.
Kristi: Excellent. Next, we also thought that the font size ought to be increased from 20 to 24 and that the typeface ought to be changed. Then, we think the letters should have simple, generous letter shapes. I've seen other book titles incorporate that look and it seems to be more kid-friendly. Right now it looks a little too corporate.
Ronald: Should it be kind of like old English style or should it be closer to Comic Sans?
Kristi: Closer to Comic Sans.
Ronald: I got a great font and I've wanted to use, but haven't had a chance. Perhaps I can try it out and send the design to you? If you sign-off on it, we can go from there.
Kristi: Sure no problem. Finally, we ought to avoid using all caps if we can on this page here.
Ronald: Are you sure? Denise has preferred it in the past. It's easier to see and makes a bold statement on the page?
Kristi: She identified it as a concern herself. I think it's a little too aggressive for our liking, plus it monopolizes too much space. As I reiterated before, we ought to have more balance on the page.
Ronald: Ok. That makes sense.
Kristi: All right. I think that's all I have. Thank you for coming in and as I said before, we've wanted to make this book more kid-friendly since we've gotten involved with this project. Maybe just keep that in mind. If you have any questions or need to check anything, just let me know.
Ronald: I'll be in touch.

Learning Points

The Present Perfect: Commenting on the Present Results of Something in the Past

You use the Present Perfect tense to talk about events that happened in the past with a connection to the present.

The form of the Present Perfect tense is:
subject +

When you want to comment on past events that have a present connection, you can use the words appear, seem and sound.

For example:

It appears I've been stressed for no reason! The project isn't due until next month!

It seems they've decided to postpone the deadline.

You sound as though you've become fed up with the current situation at work.

Examples:

- I don't know if we've ever met before. I'm Kristi.
- We've felt since we saw the illustrations that they appear to be too busy.
- I've seen other book titles incorporate that look and it seems to be more kid-friendly.
- I got a great font that I've wanted to use, but haven't had a chance.
- Denise has preferred it in the past.
- We've wanted to make this book more kid-friendly since we've gotten involved with this project.

Learning Points

Modals for Expressing Duty and Advice

You use should and ought to to talk about duty and advice.

When you want to say what the right thing to do is or the best thing to do is, you can use the modals should or ought to and their Perfect forms should have and ought to have. You use the Perfect forms to refer to duties and advice for past situations. Should and ought to are not as strong as must, but are more appropriate in formal situations, like in the workplace.

For example:

We should prepare for the presentation this afternoon. We won't have time otherwise.

You should always be present at the morning meetings.

They ought to give money to charities - it helps to market the brand.

Who should we include in the memo?

Examples:

- We've also felt that typeface ought to be changed.
- We think the letters should have simple, generous letter shapes.
- As I reiterated before, we ought to have more balance on the page.
- Should it be kind of like old English style or should it be closer to Comic Sans?
