

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Winnie's World is under a microscope.

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- How do you respond to feedback at work or school?
- What is the best way to provide feedback?

Can Do Statements

- I can express annoyance in present and past situations related to work and job issues.
- I can talk about uncertainty in past events related to work and job issues.
- I can give a supported argument about work-related processes.

Let's Explore!

Denise and Kristi reflect on Winnie's World. What kind of feedback* are they planning to share with the author?

* "Feedback" is information about reactions to a product or performance on a task.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Denise: They could have offered to reimburse us for that ... Yeah! Well, they shouldn't have changed a thing ... Really? Well, you might have to do something, otherwise, you will have a hornet's nest on your hands ... OK. Let's talk about this later ... [Knocking] Kristi! Come in. Sit down.
- Kristi: Business?
- Denise: Ugh! There's some trouble with the printers. They may have made a mistake that they could have corrected by now and they had better do something about it. Anyway, how was Winnie's World? I want to hear your perspective.
- Kristi: So, first, the good points. I'd like to say that the topic is timely and relevant for children. I think a book like this would be extremely marketable to young people and schools with all the online bullying. Next, the main character is an absolute delight. I could see children relating to this character, but not only that, parents would also feel an affinity toward Winnie. Finally, the writing style has a nice rhythm to it. It reads almost like a song. It has a nice flow.
- Denise: Until ... ?
- Kristi: Until the ending. I don't like the ending at all. It's too abrupt and just seems to come out of nowhere. The book moves along so nicely until that point. It might seem fine to some people, but for me it almost seems that the author might have been in a rush to finish it. It is definitely missing something that ties the story together. The ending certainly could be better. Honestly, I think it might be a good idea to contact Marisa and discuss setting up a meeting. This might be overstepping my bounds, but I think we should discuss an alternate ending. In any regard, that was my opinion.
- Denise: Thank you, Kristi. That was a very thorough review and I completely agree. I enjoyed the book immensely, but that ending could have been better. It left a bad taste in my mouth. Something is missing and I think that ending doesn't fit the narrative.
- Kristi: What should we do?
- Denise: We'll set up a meeting with Marisa sometime this week.
- Kristi: OK. I think that's the best course of action.

Let's Practice!

Marisa's book is under a microscope.*

*Under a microscope means carefully examined.

Instructions: Match the two columns to correctly complete the sentences. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

COLUMN A

1. Yeah! Well, they
2. It left a bad
3. This might be overstepping
4. It's too abrupt and just
5. Well, you might have to do

COLUMN B

- a. my bounds, but I think we should suggest an alternate ending.
- b. taste in my mouth.
- c. seems to come out of nowhere.
- d. shouldn't have changed a thing.
- e. something, otherwise, you will have a hornet's nest on your hands.

Let's Practice!

The duo provide professional feedback on Winnie's World.

Instructions: Use the words and phrases from the box to correctly complete the sentences. Use capital letters where necessary. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

also feel / not only that / reads / could see / finally / think / has a / course of action / in any regard / next / character is an / first / like to say

1. So, _____, the good points. I'd _____ that the topic is timely and relevant for children.
2. _____, the main _____ absolute delight.
3. _____, that was my opinion. I _____ that's the best _____.
4. _____, the writing style _____ nice rhythm to it. It _____ almost like a song.
5. I _____ children relating to this character, but _____, parents would _____ an affinity toward Winnie, too.

Extension Activity

Thinking about a time in history.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Think about a period in history, like the 15th century for example.
- Do a search online or at the library for pictures from this time period.
- Discuss problems that people in that time might have faced because of technology, social customs, beliefs, etc.
- Write 6 sentences in groups comparing life then and now.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I find pictures online or at the library about a period in history.

☐
☐

I discuss problems of that time in groups.

☐
☐

I write sentences comparing life then and now.

☐
☐

Target Words

- to come out of nowhere (expression): to be a total surprise
e.g. The ending just seems to come out of nowhere.
- to reimburse (verb): to repay a sum of money that has been spent or lost e.g. They could have offered to reimburse us for that.
- a hornet's nest on your hands (expression): to have a lot of trouble to deal with e.g. You might have to do something, otherwise, you will have a hornet's nest on your hands.
- bullying (noun): the act of using superior strength or influence to intimidate someone e.g. This would be extremely marketable to young people and schools with all the online bullying.
- affinity (noun): a natural liking for or attraction to a person, thing, or idea e.g. Parents would also feel an affinity toward Winnie.
- abrupt (adjective): sudden and unexpected
e.g. The ending is too abrupt.
- to overstep my bounds (verb): to do more than you are allowed to do or should do e.g. This might be overstepping my bounds, but I think we should suggest an alternate ending.
- immensely (adverb): a lot; to a great degree
e.g. I enjoyed the book immensely.

Learning Points

Modals to Express Annoyance

When you want to express annoyance about present or past situations, you can use modal verbs.

You use the modals might, could, might have and could have to express annoyance.

Look at the chart for some examples:

Modal	Meaning/Use	Example
might	express annoyance when someone doesn't do something	You might let me know when you're going to be late!
could	express annoyance when someone doesn't do something	You could e-mail me so I know!
might have	critical comment/express annoyance	We might have all been fired!
could have	critical comment/express annoyance	He could have offered to help with the project!

Examples:

- Well, you might have to do something, otherwise, you will have a hornet's nest on your hands.
- It might seem fine to some people.
- They shouldn't have changed a thing.

Learning Points

Talking About Uncertainty: Modal Perfect

When you want to talk about past events and you are not sure if they happened or not, you can use modal perfect (modal + past participle).

For example:

You could have forgotten it in the boardroom. (= It's possible that you forgot it in the boardroom. I'm not sure.)

She can't have started the meeting already! (= I don't think she has started the meeting.)

He must have e-mailed you the notes from the meeting. (= I'm almost certain that he e-mailed you.)

They should have started the project by now. (= I think they have started the project.)

Examples:

- I enjoyed the book, but that ending could have been better.
- They could have offered to reimburse us for that.
- They may have made a mistake that they could have corrected by now.
- The author might have been in a rush to finish it.

